BRITISH RECAPTURE PORT OF BERBERA

Raid on Still Results in Arrest of Seven Men

Federal Agents and Police Seize 45,000 Gallons of Mash Still Is Valued at $25,000, Is Equipped With Four Large Vats; 800 Gallons of Alcohol Are Taken; Manufactory Well Disguised

Seven men were arrested, and an alleged still and two alleged "drops" were raided shortly before 8 o'clock Saturday evening by 15 federal agents assisted by Chief of Police Charles Phinney, Lieutenant Frederick C. Stoudt and Officers James Harnen and Grover Hof-day. The still was located in the former boiler house on a former brickyard on North street, at the city line, while one of the alleged "drops" was on Martin's Lane, just off of Cedar street, and the other on the Costello farm on the Flatbush road.

The seven men arrested in the raids were:
John Caprotti, 25, of 192 Ten Broeck avenue.
Peter Caprotti, 23, of 192 Ten Broeck avenue.
Joseph Bosco, 38, of 132 Prospect street.
Tony Bosco, 30, of 627 East 14th street, New York.
Vincent Cernigliaro, 49, of 502 East 12th street, New York.
Vito Castiglione, 20, of 122 Allen street, New York.
Francisco Gervasi, 44, of 502 East 12th street, New York.
It was expected that the seven men would be arraigned some time today before Charles de la Vergne, U. S. commissioner, in his office on Wall street for a preliminary hearing. The charges against the seven men are expected to be read in federal court in New York.

Under Surveillance
From what could be learned the places raided had been under surveillance for several weeks before the raids were staged. It is said that the federal agents have been in town for some time working with the local police department. The raids, which were staged simultaneously, were carried out with dispatch, and resulted in the seizure of a large amount of materials, which were said to be used in the manufacture of alcohol, including a large quantity of sugar.

$25,000 Still
Chief Phinney estimated that the still which was raided represented an investment of from $20,000 to $25,000. The building that housed the still was formerly used as a boiler house. It was equipped with four large vats having a total capacity of between 40,000 and 45,000 gallons of mash, and two stills fired by oil burners. One of the stills was of 1,000 gallon capacity and the other 300-gallon capacity. According to the police both stills were operating at the time the raid was made. A large quantity of mash was seized in the raid and approximately 800 gallons of alcohol and a large quantity of sugar, yeast and other materials used in the manufacture of the alcohol.

Men and Trucks Seized
The group of officers who descended upon the alleged "drop" on Martin's Lane, seized two trucks. One of the trucks was loaded with 20 tons of sugar, which it was alleged was used in the manufacture of the alcohol, while the smaller truck, it was said, was used to move the sugar from the "drop" to the still. The two Caprotti brothers and Tony Bosco and Cernigliaro were found at the Martin's Lane "drop."

Actor Is Located in Pacific Hospital Following His Mishap in Plane

Hollywood, March 17 (AP)—James Stewart, 32, currently the movies' No. 1 actor, was located in a hospital today, several hours after his private airplane made a forced landing near Van Nuys. He had registered as James Smith.

His physician, Dr. Saul Fox, declared:

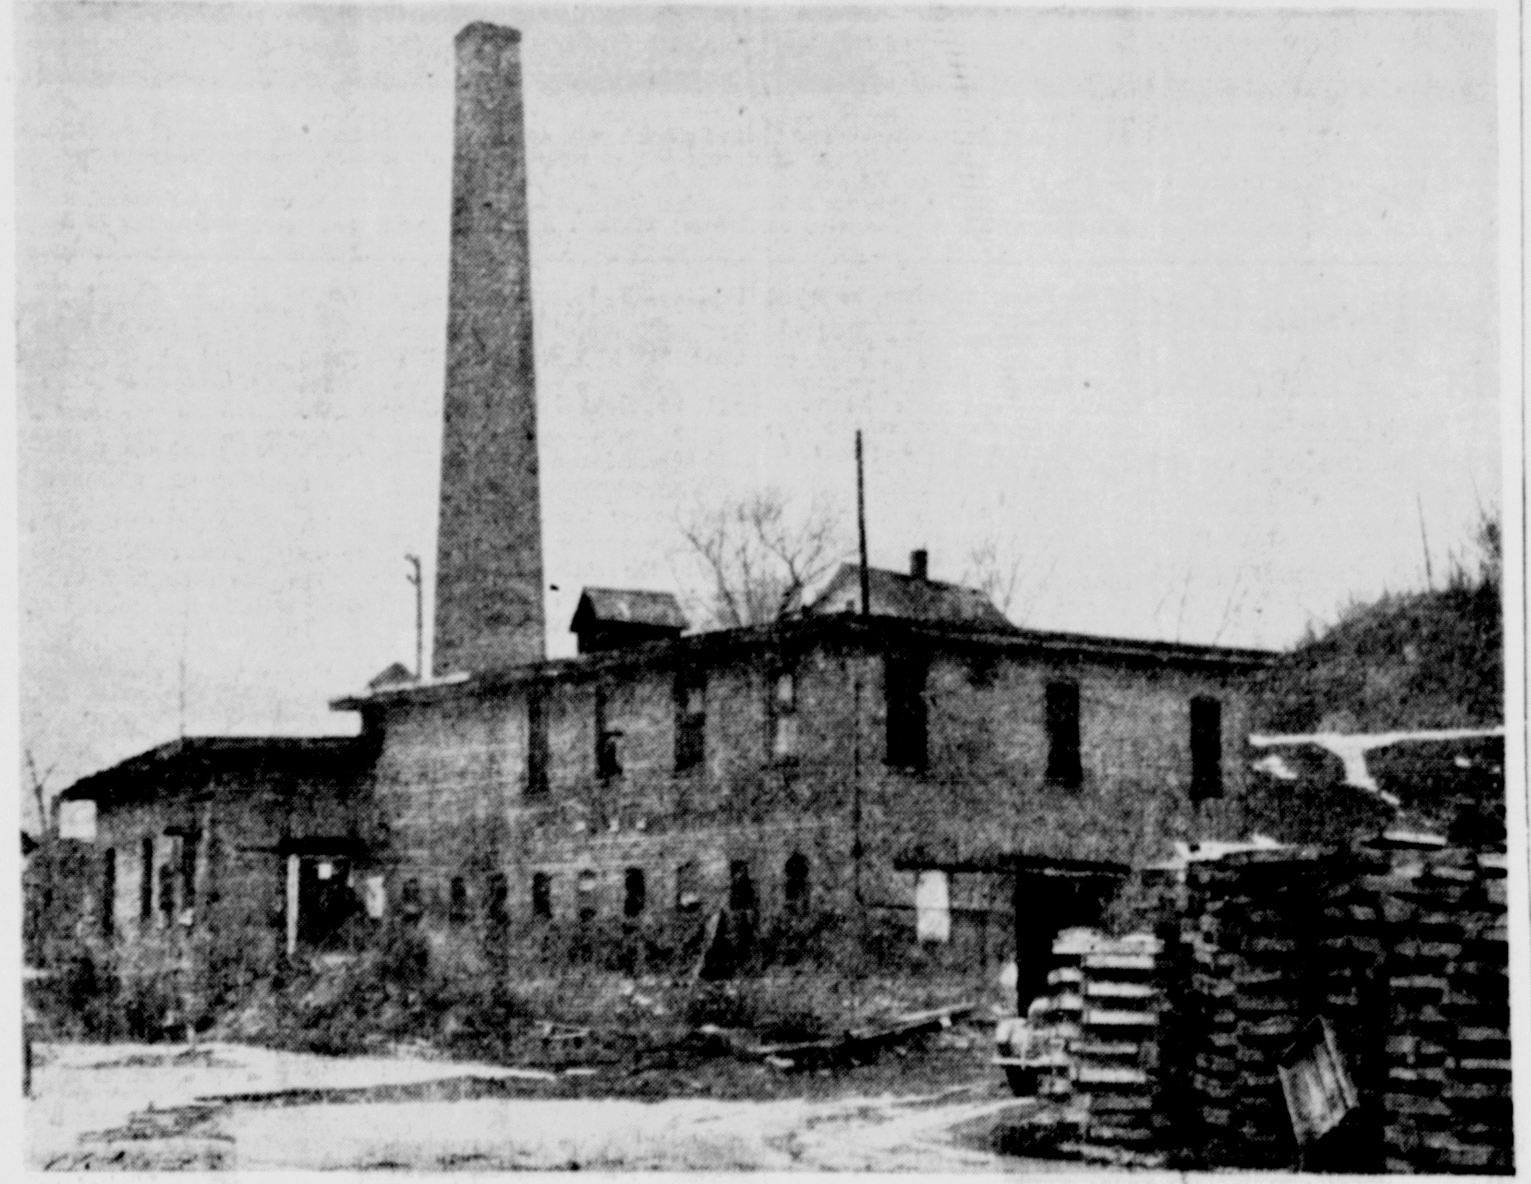

"I can give you no statement now, except to say he is fine, just fine."

Stewart's plane was forced down, from a cause not explained, shortly after he took off for a short flight late Sunday afternoon. He received his commercial pilot's license last week.

Stewart recently won the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences' 1940 male acting award for his performance in "The Philadelphia Story."

He is scheduled for induction into the army later this week.

Where Federal Agents, Police Discovered Still

Federal men and members of the local police department raided the largest still of its kind ever found in Ulster county, on Saturday evening. The elaborate equipment was concealed in this plant on North street, a building formerly used in the making of bricks at former brickyard. The picture shows the boxes used for mushrooms which were piled in front of the building, police said, as a "front" for the activities carried on within the building. Other photos on page 8.

Water Board Defers Action on Ulster Service Petition

Twenty Township Signers Ask Service Extend to Section Adjacent to Lucas Avenue

Kingston's water board has deferred action on a petition filed with the board by 20 residents of the town of Ulster asking that the city's water service be extended to their homes, which are just over the city line.

The petition states that a recent investigation and report by the state health department indicated that the water supply on the properties was "unfit for human consumption and a danger to the health life of those drinking the water."

The petition urged that the water board "make available the water supply of the city, and extend to the properties water for domestic and private use."

The petition was signed by the following property owners:
Macel G. Marshall of 329 Lucas avenue.
Cuthbert Marshall of 329 Lucas avenue.
Oscar Coddington of Golf Terrace.

Resources Board Plans Multi-Billion Works Program After Crisis

Projects Will Be Designed to Take Up Slack in Employment When War Operations Are Stopped; Congress Is Given Outline

Washington, March 17 (AP)—A six-year "post emergency" public works program, contemplating possible expenditure of new billions of dollars to stabilize employment when defense industries curtail operations, was recommended today by the National Resources Board.

The board's plan for "development of resources and stabilization of employment" was transmitted to congress by President Roosevelt.

Declaring "the preparation for post-emergency adjustments" and maintenance of "a strong and healthy economy" are essential to total defense, the federal planning agency recommended establishment of a revolving fund to be administered by the President for the immediate inauguration of surveys, investigations and preparation of engineering plans and specifications for selected projects.

In his message of transmittal to congress, Mr. Roosevelt said the revolving fund "would make available a sheaf of useful projects without in any way committing the government to the immediate construction of such works."

"Because of the current national emergency," he added, "projects not needed for defense have been temporarily deferred. As a result, we are now in the process of storing up a reservoir of non-defense public work which can be loosed when the pace of rearmament slackens."

Asserting that national defense was "more than a mobilization of a nation's armed strength, Mr. Roosevelt continued:

"Equally must we focus public thought on the ideals and objectives of the program."

Two Army Planes Attract Crowd at Kingston Airport

Northrup Bombers Arrive and Take Off Saturday Afternoon; Other Stops Are Made

Two United States Army twin-motored Northrup bombers on a tour of inspection of airfields to determine their possible use as emergency landing fields for large bombers, dropped in at the Kingston Airport Saturday afternoon after circling the city for a quarter of an hour looking for the landing field and ascertaining the layout of the field. The two planes, a type about three years old, started out from Patterson Field, Dayton, O., Saturday morning en route to Mitchell Field.

Both planes are from Lawson Field, Fort Benning, Ga., and were in command of Lieut. Schuster, one of the army's most expert flyers. With him were Lieutenants Odell and Smith, and Sergeant Kassabin. On the way from Dayton the ships had set down at Syracuse and from Kingston went to New Hackensack and then to Mitchell Field.

Planes Attract Attention
The two big planes attracted attention of Kingstonsians as they circled the city for several minutes before dropping down upon the snow-covered flying field. No difficulty was encountered in making a landing but it was impossible to get the ships back in the air until town of Ulster highway plows, in charge of Pete Boice had been summoned by Ray W. Garrahan, local flying enthusiast, and a runway cleared.

Although of a type which is now considered "old" the planes were powered by twin motors of 1,000 horsepower each and have a capacity for carrying bombs. Under ordinary circumstances this type of plane usually requires a mile runway to take off safely. Mr. Garrahan was informed by the officers.

Mr. Garrahan said in a talk with Lieut. Schuster he was informed that the planes had sufficient gas to make their destination but had been ordered to inspect small airports en route to New York to ascertain whether these fields were suitable for landing fields for light bombers in case of needs.

The local airfield was suitable for such emergency landings Mr. Garrahan said he was informed by the flyers except for the two

Britain Declares U. S. Is Virtually In Europe's War

(By The Associated Press)
President Roosevelt's Saturday night speech was cheered by the British press today as bringing the United States virtually into the war and denounced in German and Italian broadcasts as the start of a "dictatorial policy of expansion."

Roosevelt urged "total effort" to arm the democracies and called upon his countrymen for sacrifices to produce "unqualified, immediate and all-out aid" to nations fighting aggressors.

These were comments from the Axis capitals:

The Berlin radio, heard in New York by CBS, said the President "only gave a new edition of his baseless attacks on Germany. . . . Roosevelt has embarked on a dictatorial policy of expansion. . . . He is called a dictator even in his own country."

The Rome radio, heard by CBS, said "the speech is interpreted here as the announcement of direct participation of American soldiers on both continents (Europe and Asia) and the foreshadowing of a tremendous blood bath."

Japanese newspapers gave prominence to parts of the speech and one carried the text on the front page, but there was no comment immediately.

54 Persons Die In Midwest Storm

Others Are Believed Lost on Superior Ice Floe; Winds Are High

(By The Associated Press)
A fatal blast of late winter cold killed at least 54 persons in the midwest over the week-end, left an undetermined number of others to an unknown fate on a Lake Superior ice floe and fanned out today into New England and the South.

The Chicago weather bureau said the great cold air mass was borne down from Canada on winds which reached unofficially reported velocities up to 85 miles an hour. It covered virtually the entire nation from the great plains region eastward.

The death toll: North Dakota, 31; Minnesota, 21; Wisconsin, 2. In addition Ohio, also hit by temperatures of 4 to 10 above zero, reported 20 week-end fatal traffic fatalities.

Forcaster R. E. Gump of Chicago said the lowest reported temperature was 22 below zero at Bemidji, Minn.

Highest officially reported wind velocities included: 70 miles an hour at Duluth, Minn.; upper New York state 40.

Gump said there would be generally fair weather in the midwest and some moderation today in the Dakotas, tonight in Minnesota and Iowa, by tomorrow afternoon in the western part of upper Mississippi valley but that it would be Wednesday before the weather "substantially moderated" throughout the north central states.

There was comparatively little snow in most sections but what there was drifted so rapidly before gales that it trapped many persons and nullified efforts of highway clearing crews. In Michigan, however, the snow ranged from 3 to 20 inches in the upper peninsula and up to 10 inches in some sections of the lower peninsula.

The blizzard still raged in upper Michigan, turning back coast

Idea Is Success

Educational Soup Kitchen Brings Food to Mind and Body to Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., March 17 (AP)—An "educational soup kitchen," which daily brings food for body and mind to several hundred down-and-outers, has been termed such a success by its originator that larger quarters are being sought.

The project, begun last October by a Canisius College professor and located near Buffalo's downtown district, feeds 250 men and provides courses in current events, economics, geometry, arithmetic, English composition, physics and drawing.

The students, "moreover, are responding to the 'man-to-man' system under which 'everyone' is admitted with no questions asked," says Father Raymond G. Bosch, Ph.D. of Canisius College, who started the eat-learn idea.

Aiding Father Bosch in teaching is Dr. George K. McCabe, Canisius economics professor, and a dozen Canisius students. A local scientist conducts a physics class,

Administration Is Opposed to Any Cuts in British Aid Funds

House Seems to Be In Favor, Senators Cite Opposition

Nye Says He Sees No Justification for Big Outlay; Glass Says He Will Fight

Washington, March 17 (AP)—President Roosevelt's call for the most urgent all-out national effort in the lease-lend program lined up administration forces solidly today against any attempts to cut the $7,000,000,000 fund asked to provide the implements of war for embattled "democracies."

In the light of Mr. Roosevelt's words, the huge appropriations bill represented positive proof that there would be no turning back in the lease-lend policy, and for that psychological reason alone supporters were determined to win the speediest possible approval for every penny requested.

Avowed opposition to voting the full $7,000,000,000 has been lacking in the House, where debate on the measure starts tomorrow, with its approval expected by Wednesday. Some senators, however, have questioned the need for so much money immediately.

Nye Opposes
Senator Nye (R., N. D.), commenting on the President's Saturday night speech, said he saw nothing in it to justify the projected multi-billion dollar outlay for arms and supplies. A member of the Senate appropriations committee which will take up the bill later this week, Nye said he would seek to have the appropriations request altered in half.

Chairman Glass (D., Va.) said, however, that he would fight to defeat any such effort. Meanwhile, the great machinery of the lease-lend program was already in action. The first shipment of material, as President Roosevelt announced, already were on their way to Britain. Other consignments were being prepared for transport. And the office of production management opened a two-day conference with industrialists and labor leaders here today to perfect methods for training an adequate supply of workers to meet defense plants needs as they materialize.

President Roosevelt's Saturday night speech—one of the most strongly-worded he has ever delivered on international affairs—continued to monopolize comment today, and some passages of it evoked speculation as to the Chief Executive's future plans.

The American people, the President said, "recognize the extreme seriousness of the present situation."

"That is why they have demanded, and got, a policy of unqualified, immediate, all-out aid to Britain, Greece, China and for all governments in exile whose homelands are temporarily occupied by the aggressors."

Aid Will Be Increased
"From now on that aid will be increased—and yet again increased—until total victory has been won."

Mr. Roosevelt's statement that on America's will to work and sacrifice depended the survival of the "vital bridge" of boats to transport supplies abroad was interpreted by some as hinting at porters, but administration supporters doubted that was the intention.

One major point of discussion was Mr. Roosevelt's statement that the national effort "must not be obstructed by unnecessary strikes, (or) by short sighted management."

Some were inclined to interpret this as presaging the enactment of a formal policy to curtail work stoppages in vital defense industries. Others, however, believed it was an admonition for the future.

Another point to receive attention was Mr. Roosevelt's words to the people: "You will have to work longer at your bench, or your plow or your machine."

This caused conjecture as to whether temporary exceptions or changes in the 40-hour-week law might be under consideration. All recent official statements on a subject have denied the likelihood of any changes, but it was noted that the President said flatly Saturday that "the concepts of 'business as usual' and 'normalcy' must be forgotten until the task is finished."

The President also said that everyone would be expected to make sacrifices "until our victory is won"—and he mentioned higher taxes as one of the sacrifices ahead.

60 Per Cent Increase
Washington, March 17 (AP)—William S. Knudsen, defense production chief, disclosed today that the seven billion dollar British aid program plus defense contracts yet to be awarded would require a 60 per cent increase in American industrial activity. Knudsen, director of the office of production management, Sidney Hillman, assistant director, Secretary Perkins and other government officials addressed a conference called to consider how to increase the number of trained workers in the vital metal trades industry.

Morgan Loses Bid
Washington, March 17 (AP)—Arthur E. Morgan, dismissed by President Roosevelt as chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, failed today to obtain a Supreme Court review of a decision upholding the President's action. Morgan, ousted for "contumacy" on March 23, 1938, appealed from a ruling by the Federal Circuit Court at Cincinnati. Justice Frankfurter did not participate in the action.

Four Persons Hurt In 9-W Accident

by the Union Circulation Co. of 5 Columbus Circle, New York, was taken to the Dale's Sanitarium at Saugerties but was reported as not seriously hurt.

According to Sergeant James J. Cunningham and Trooper Walter Keefe the crash happened as a south bound car of Stanley Young, magazine salesman, turned left to enter a gas station. The car of Young, which was owned by Harry C. Jolley of Smithville, Ga., and the car of Champlin crashed almost head on. When the Young machine and the north bound Champlin car collided the Young machine was swung around and headed north again. In the crash a third car operated south and following the Young machine also collided with the Young car. The occupants of this car, driven by Joseph Battiatto of New York city, escaped injury.

After being swung around and headed north again the Young machine, after grazing the Battiatto car, continued in a northerly direction for some distance and finally came to rest near the entrance of the Miniature Diner and gas station.

Mr. Champlin was slightly injured and was treated at the Kingston Hospital but was not admitted. Young was also treated for a cut over the left eye. Sergeant Cunningham said there were other cars in which the magazine crew was traveling. Mrs. Bates's husband was riding in another car which had passed the scene just prior to the crash.

of the Young machine in which Mrs. Bates was a passenger. The crash took place about 4:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon near the gas station at the junction of Route 9-W and route 32 which runs to Glasco. No charge was made by any of the people involved in the crash.

Occupants of the Battiatto car were Joseph Battiatto of New York city, driver; Rose V. Pallapino, Frances and Penelope Mallarios of Brooklyn and Mrs. Minnie Pallapino of Sunnyside, Long Island, none of whom were injured.

Local Students Beat Rensselaer in Quiz

Leonard Rabin, Katherine Nagy and Paul Beshgetoorian, Kingston High School students, were winners in the quiz program of the "Little Red School House" over Station WGY in Schenectady on Sunday afternoon, when they defeated a team from Rensselaer. Long Island Men Escape Injuries In Glenford Crash

Hellmuth Lewin of 117-01 Park Lane Square, Kew Gardens, L. I., and Diexter Gompertz of 84-51 Abington avenue, Kew Gardens, missed the skiing at Phoenicia Sunday afternoon and lost their car by fire, but at that they considered themselves fortunate to escape practically uninjured from an automobile accident on Route 28, between Maverick Rest and the O'Brien gas station at Glenford.

The 1931 Chrysler convertible coupe, driven by Gompertz, went out of control when it struck a deep hole in the road. Deputy Sheriff O'Brien, who investigated the accident, found that the coupe shot into the ditch, ran sideways along the edge of the road for perhaps 100 feet and then crashed against a concrete culvert guard, was thrown into the air and landed against the fence.

Lewin was thrown out, but escaped with nothing more serious than a scratch on his hand. Gompertz was shaken up but otherwise uninjured.

Gasoline from a broken gas line caught fire from the heated motor and soon the entire car was ablaze. Merton Doremus and George Reynolds brought the equipment from the Woodstock Fire Department, but the car was practically destroyed before they could reach the scene.

Railroad Officials Blame Saboteurs For Wreck of Train

which spliced this section of rail to the adjoining rails.

"That the derailment was the result of deliberate action was further indicated by the fact that the end of the section of rail involved had been moved only 22 inches from its normal position, or the length of the bend wire, which connects the rail sections and carries the electric current operating the signals."

"The bend wire itself was not disturbed and the railroad signal system was unaffected. The fact that the bend wire was undisturbed definitely indicates that it was intended that the train should get a clear signal and run into the removed rail. If the bend wire had been broken, the train would have been stopped by signal before running over the damaged section."

The railroad promised a "full investigation into every angle of the case," Federal Bureau of Investigation agents from Pittsburgh entered the inquiry.

The Manhattan Limited rolled past the scene 20 minutes earlier and railroad officials expressed suspicion that it might have been the object of a wreck plot.

tives of our national life. We must seek wider understanding of the possibilities for that future we prepare to defend.

"Among these possibilities are the larger use, the conservation and development of the nation's resources."

No Specific Costs

No specific cost figures for such a six-year public works program were mentioned in the formal report, but a board source said it necessarily would involve expenditure of billions of dollars to create employment on worthy projects.

The program would be geared to begin operation immediately upon the passing of the defense emergency.

In its preparation the board recommended further: Continued and invigorated efforts to secure the preparation of six-year programs or capital budgets by federal agencies, state governments, local governments and other agencies, public and private, anticipating a large volume of construction activity.

Advance authorization by congress of procedures for grants, loans, guarantees of loans, leasing arrangements, or other devices for aid to state and local governments for non-federal projects. Advance authorization by congress of construction of federal projects in the "A" priority list of the recommended six-year program, such authorization to be effective later upon appropriation of funds by congress.

Appropriation for advance purchase of sites of projects by appropriate governmental agencies. Development of method of financing public works projects and studies of related problems of investment, taxation, and the federal, state, and local shares of responsibility for costs of various types of public works and related activities.

Coordination of public works construction at all levels of government, with other public policies which affect the level of business activity and employment, such as fiscal policy, social security policy, and policies of aid to private enterprise.

Welsh Singers Net $78.19 for Britain

Announcement was made this morning by Evan J. Davis, sponsor of the Poughkeepsie, Vt., Welsh Male Chorus which sang in the high school auditorium Sunday afternoon for the benefit of Bundles for Britain, that a check for $78.19 had been presented to the local organization.

At the concert, Mr. Davis announced, a free-will offering of $201.18 was received. After the expenses were paid and the proceeds divided with the singers, Mr. Davis presented the check to Mrs. Myron S. Teller, chairman of the Ulster County Branch of Bundles for Britain.

Enthusiasm was high from the singing of the first song and encore after encore was demanded from this group of state miners from the rich Vermont valley, who are amateurs and sing as an avocation.

For an amateur group the balance was one of the best examples heard in this city. The finesse, spirit and musicianship that the Welshmen showed proved the saying that "a Welshman would rather sing than eat." The program presented was well rounded, each number was in keeping with the spirit of the program and no number was beyond the abilities of the singers.

The composite program consisted of Welsh airs, rollicking sea songs, some Welsh hymns, quiet dignified tone poems and the majestic "Hallelujah Chorus." As encores they sang a Welsh folk song "Annabell," "Winter's Song," "Saviour, Like a Shepherd Lead Me." The soloists were William T. Roberts, who sang "The Big Bass Viol" and "Captain John McPherson"; John Sechrist, who sang "The Green Eyed Dragon" and "Old Mother Hubbard" after Handel; Catherine Jones, the only woman singer in the group who sang "Yn Lach Ti Gymru" and "Smiling Through the Tears," and Ernest Morris who sang "Old Man River" and "There Always Be an England." This last was a request number.

The chorus was en route to Poughkeepsie, Vt., after a concert Saturday evening in Town Hall, New York city. Following the Kingston concert, the members were entertained at the Governor Clinton Hotel by Mr. Davis and his assistants Stanley J. Matthews, Arthur G. Carr, Howard A. Lewis, Senator Arthur H. Wicks, John W. Matthews, Harold S. Brigham and Sherwood E. Davis.

Irish Social for K. of C.'s
The meeting of the Knights of Columbus this evening will be dedicated to the Irish with special refreshments in keeping with the spirit of St. Patrick's Day. After the regular business meeting lecturer Al Weierich will have charge of the entertainment. He will have his portable recording machine on the platform and may ask anyone to make records so that they can be played back to the assembly. This proved a popular form of entertainment at another meeting.

Bride-Elect Honored
Miss Marion Healy of Henry street was guest of honor at a shower and bridge given by Mrs. Walter Perret of Lake Katrine Friday evening. Honors were won by Mrs. Erwin Crow and Mrs. G. Warren Kias. Others attending were Mrs. Boyd Miller, Mrs. Harry Rigby, Mrs. Theodore Peck, Miss Catherine McCormick, Mrs. Alfred Bruckert, Miss Rosalind Ellison, Mrs. George Matthews, Mrs. Miles Pollock and Mrs. Richard Riseley.

Hostess at St. Patrick's Party
Miss Doris Merrihew entertained a group of her classmates at a St. Patrick's party Saturday afternoon at the home of her mother, Mrs. LeVan Merrihew, on O'Neil street. During the afternoon games and quizzes were enjoyed and a buffet supper served. The guests were the Misses Verna Franz, Dolores Legg, Shirley Lutz, Frances Lown, Charlotte Smith and Rosemarie Maraballa.

BRIDE-TO-BE IS ASSURED ALTERATIONS MUST BE MADE ALMOST ALWAYS IN HEIRLOOM WEDDING DRESS

Once in a while it is announced, because it is exceptional, "The bride wore her mother's (or her grandmother's) dress without alterations." Sometimes the account of the wedding says "with very slight alterations." A bride-to-be who writes me today tells me that her mother wants her to wear her wedding dress, but for some unexplained reason her mother insists that it be worn as is. My correspondent says:

"I would be glad to have a dress made of the material but the way it is made it is most unbecoming to me. I don't want to hurt mother's feelings but she thinks, except for refitting the side seams, a dress that is an heirloom must not be touched. Isn't it true that often a bride changes an heirloom dress drastically?"

On this question I can certainly assure her that the occasion when a dress fits as it is both in size and in becomingness is very rare. And that so long as the material is the original and as much of the trimming left untouched as is practical, it may in truth be stated "The bride wore her mother's dress."

Table Serving Details
Dear Mrs. Post: During the past few years I have been so busy with my small children that I haven't kept up with things. I would like to know (1st), whether the bread and butter plates and individual butter knives are still used and (2nd), is it now proper to serve salad on separate plates with the main course if one chooses? If so, how are bread and butter plates and salad plates all placed on the left side? (3rd) Is it true that the salad is just as often served first?

Answer: (1) Individual bread and butter plates and butter knives are used on formal as well as informal lunch tables, on all supper

ST. PATRICK'S DAY

St. Patrick, the patron saint of Ireland, is honored today throughout the United States not only by Irish-Americans, but by people of other origins, who admire him for his great contribution to Christianity. It is said that when St. Patrick went to Ireland as a missionary there was not a Christian there, but when he died there was not a pagan.

The Irish always have displayed great loyalty to the United States and it is significant to have a group of 129 prominent Irish-Americans—including educators, writers, legislators, lawyers, soldiers, labor leaders and a former police commissioner—send a joint cable to Prime Minister De Valera concerning aid to Britain.

They ask him to open Eire's western ports to Great Britain because "the lifeline between Great Britain and America has become the lifeline of civilization."

"This lifeline is threatened," they said. "We ask you to do this for the sake of that Irish freedom which our ancestors fought to win. We ask it also as Americans. What we ask of you, America is preparing to do herself by opening her ports to the British."

They grant that they may be risk in such action, but add, "When have Irishmen been afraid to take a risk against the powers of evil?"

INCOME TAX BOUQUETS

Well, the Ides of March—and the final day for filing income tax returns—came and went, and the nation made a great discovery. Exemptions were lower, the defense tax had been added, many persons formerly not subject to the tax were included. The chronic grouch and the fellow with a mad on against the government made their usual complaints. The great host of other citizens, who might have been expected to complain too, didn't do so.

Strange tales came from cashiers' windows at internal revenue offices here and there about the country. There was the man who had suffered business losses during the taxable year and owed the government no money at all. He handed a check for $50 through the wicket and shook his head when the cashier said, "Better think it over a little more. You don't have to pay anything." The man had thought it over. He said his $50 wasn't much, but he wanted to do something for a country he loved because it had done so much for him. The man had come as a boy from Lithuania 34 years ago. There were many stories of similar import.

On the government's side of this great American transaction there was also a favorable report. All jokes to the contrary, the citizen with a simple earned income to report found the tax form simpler, clearer, easier to make out than ever before. "You had a pleasant impression of governmental efficiency and felt an agreeable surge of complacent patriotism," explained one citizen of means who had traveled widely in most of the civilized world. "Our taxes are collected with what seems to me to be a marked absence of waiting and bureaucratic waste motion."

Such honest confession is good for American souls at any time, especially today.

ANTS AHEAD

A startling statement is made by Prof. William T. Heron, psychologist at the University of Minnesota. In a neck-and-neck race for survival man is lagging behind the ant, he says. Up to now the small-brained insects—the flies, social beetles, bees—have been winning the race.

In a way this is a comforting thought. The ants will take care of Hitler in due time if human beings fail to do so.

Still, nobody likes to think that this may be necessary. Neither do people like the idea of being beaten by ants and other insects.

There is something to be said for man. He hasn't been on the job in his own behalf for more than a million years or so. The ants, on the other hand, have continued steadily in their course for 15,000,000 years. Man has made quite remarkable progress because his kind of brain enabled him to adapt himself to new surroundings and conditions. Upset an ant's routine, and he's all out of luck.

This suggests that when man gets around to being his own best friend instead of his own worst enemy, he will figure out a way to hold his own against even the small-brained insects.

FIGHTING FORM

It is remarkable how quickly "soft" recruits are hardened by modern army methods, and how much weak-looking prospects can endure. Donald Mackenzie tells of some impressive things he has seen in the English army.

At one training center he saw men who marched 30 miles with full equipment, then were wakened after half an hour of sleep and marched 12 miles farther.

These, he was told, were "men in the intermediary stage of training, who three months before were humped over ledgers or tying up parcels in city stores." In the "blitz" class the finished soldiers swim rivers in mid-winter and keep right on for miles in wet clothes, on "iron rations."

If they can endure such a drill when only half-trained, what can't they do when they're really hardened?

American recruits won't be pushed like that, because there isn't the urgent need of it. But presumably they could stand it as well as the Englishmen.

"All that a man hath will he give for his life," and a nation, too, will empty its pockets to keep going.

HEART DISEASE

We are apt to think of heart disease as being caused by strenuous exercise or hard mental work in men and women at and past middle age. As a matter of fact, heart disease stands first on the list as a cause of death and takes its greatest toll from those of advanced years.

What we fail to remember, however, is that although the heart may not fail entirely till middle age or past, the reason that it is failing is that, perhaps, in early childhood it was affected—weakened—by one of the diseases of childhood. Physiologists tell us that disease of the heart at birth is practically unknown since Nature starts the majority of human beings on life's journey with a sound and normal heart.

It is during childhood that many hearts are permanently damaged, we are told by Dr. Herman G. Morgan in Hygieia. The most common cause is so-called rheumatic fever. Next in order are tonsillitis, scarlet fever, diphtheria, measles, whooping cough and other infections of nose, throat and lungs. In fact, the entering of the human body by any infectious process causing a rise in temperature or any general reaction of the body may permanently injure the structures of the heart.

If, then, such childhood ailments or scarlet fever, whooping cough, tonsillitis, and measles can damage the heart and be the forerunner of the failing heart of middle age, what can be done to prevent future heart disease or make it possible for middle age heart patients to live for many years? To prevent or lessen the harmful effect of childhood ailments on the heart, parents should follow completely the advice of the physician of having the child remain quietly in bed for at least two or more days after the temperature is down to normal. It is hard to forbid or prevent the youngster from getting up or walking about the room but this is a case where it is kind to be cruel in that he may be prevented from becoming a heart cripple. After severe illnesses it may be that exercise should not be permitted for weeks.

It is not unusual to find permanent heart damage in children who have had repeated attacks of tonsillitis, or even rheumatic fever, but have not had a physician in attendance.

Why Worry About Your Heart?

Everyone is interested in the condition of his or her heart. Worried if it is skipping beats, beating irregularly, or beating rapidly. Send today for Dr. Barton's helpful booklet entitled "Why Worry About Your Heart" (No. 102), which tells the story of your heart in a simple and understandable manner. Address your request to The Bell Library, Post Office Box 75, Station O, New York, N. Y., enclosing ten cents to cover cost of handling and mailing and mention the Kingston Daily Freeman.

With cargo space at a premium, war conditions are putting fresh demands on the Forest Products Laboratory at Madison, Wis. Containers for munitions, for example, should take as little space as possible, but the boxes of crates must stand up under rough handling. The U. S. Forest Service reports that the laboratory was recently called on to redesign a wooden container for the shipment of bombs for British use. The new container employs aspen instead of the more expensive white pine, and calls for less cargo space, less lumber, and is lighter yet stronger than the original container.

I Find Treason

By Richard Rollins

It is hardly an exaggeration to say that my hair stood on end as I read Richard Rollins' "I Find Treason." This is the hardest hitting and the most minutely documented expose of Nazi propaganda and direct action in this country that has so far come to my desk. The documentation is highly important to a reader like myself, who has little direct knowledge of such matters, beyond the receipt of a few pamphlets from William Dudley Pelley, and a few books from certain publishing concerns. And in this book, Mr. Rollins has not merely transcribed. He uses facsimile exclusively, and at the end provides a long "dossier" of documents chosen from his files.

The reader may read (and rapidly, for the text is fast moving) and form his own conclusions. Rollins got into the investigation business almost accidentally. He had a small income and nothing to do, and wandered one day—before Hitler came to power—into a Yorkville rally. What he heard frightened him. Shortly he was working for the now almost forgotten McCormack congressional committee; later he collaborated with Dickstein, Untermyer, with various leagues against Nazism, with the state of New York, the FBI and other organizations which he mentions in "I Find Treason."

Rollins' first major exploit was a one-man "raid" on the German ship Deutschland which, he says, was working for the now almost turned up all sorts of propaganda material, and some other things contained two pistols each. Later, he writes he entered the employ of an organization in which Pelley was interested, and learned interesting things. Still later he describes his work in securing part of the evidence that sent Fritz Kuhn to prison; exposed, according to his statement, the enrollment of aliens in the New York national guard; the connection between the Bund and the Ku Klux Klan, and the activities of Germany in the pre-war rash of Irish bombing tragedies. He goes into the "Christian Front," Father Charles E. Coughlin, the activities of Fritz Wiedemann, and a great many other men and organizations.

"I Find Treason" is exciting, frightening, and probably will not be very popular on the Wilhelmstrasse.

March 31 Deadline For Applications

Farmers Urged to File Them for Payments in '40

Ithaca, N. Y., March 17.—Farmers of Ulster county are reminded that applications for payments earned under the 1940 agriculture conservation program should be filed before March 31. The applications should be in the county agricultural conservation office.

A large proportion of New York state farmers who took part in the program last year have already filed their applications, says Earl A. Flansburgh, state executive assistant with headquarters at Ithaca. The remainder are urged to do so before the March 31 closing date if they are to receive payment for the soil-building and soil-protecting practices carried out on their farms.

With county offices engaged in sign-ups for the 1941 program, and in completing details for this year before the rush of spring work begins, farmers will avoid delays if they file their applications for 1940 payments promptly in the agricultural conservation office, Mr. Flansburgh says.

Washington Daybook

By Jack Stinnett

Washington—Rep. Luther Patrick, of Birmingham, Ala., who is really no old-timer himself but a shrewd and observant third-term, the other day delivered a lecture to the 74 new members of Congress. Some of the House ancients sat and listened too, and a good many described it as the soundest advice ever handed out to the youngsters.

Patrick might have summed up his advice as "A Primer for Freshmen Congressmen"—and subtitled it, or How to Hold Your Job."

Although it is going to take two instalments of this column to do it, so sure am I that it will give you a clearer insight into the problems of your representative and a deeper understanding of his obligations, accomplishments and failures, that I am going to pass along as much as I can of Patrick's lecture. Here then is a congressman's estimate of what a congressman should be and how he should conduct himself.

Assuring the congressmen that he knew just how they got here—"You heard the horn of duty—do not confuse it with the cornucopia—sound throughout the country-side and you simply had to join the pack," Patrick said he would have no time telling them they should not crowd into an elevator ahead of a Senator. That one is too easy, he explained. But he would give them a list of things to be remembered, "based on certain mistakes I have made."

"(1) Avoid being too original. There is nothing smarter than, no matter what you say, laying it on someone else. This is easily done by saying, 'Quote, blickey, blickey, blickey, unquote.' My personal originality is slight in degree and humble in nature, but even that I have found a bother-hindrance more than help."

"(2) There is no rule nor reason against a congressman's feeling free to take the floor to speak if he has something to say. . . . Do not try to say too much. When they beat a congressman, it usually involves something that he said. Some very clever congressmen are able to talk and say very little, but say it well."

"(3) Do not get tied up in politics on either side of your home state or district. We want you to stay with us here as long as you can."

"(4) Be cautious as to the nature of your personal courtesies. Don't send the speaker (Ed. Note.—Rep. Sam Rayburn is pretty bald, to say the least) a comb or hair brush for a birthday or Christmas present."

"(5) Here is one thing that is difficult to get at but as you have now become a public-life person, I assure you it is quite important. Learn never to relax and let your features droop or permit this sort of expression to get on your face while illustrating a story, when there is a slight chance of company around, for some alert news photographer will, for the first time you have been photographed, probably shoot you from behind a sofa, a cook-stove or paw-paw bush and that stupid wedge-begone face will be yours all over the nation as well as back home. (Author's Note: I personally interviewed seven photographers on this item and not one of them ever shot a picture from behind a sofa or a cook-stove and only two of them knew what a paw-paw bush was. But they all agreed that, just as in the days of daguerotypes, if you want a pleasant picture, look pleasant, please.)"

"(6) If you find that you must really crack down on somebody . . . all not ever say anything that will sustain a motion that it be expunged from the (Congressional)

American Aircraft Will Play Major Role in Battles of Atlantic and Mediterranean

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, March 17.—American aircraft will come into its own this spring as a powerful weapon in the battle of the Atlantic and the battle of the Mediterranean. While the actual number of planes shipped or flown to British forces is relatively small in comparison to what it will be before the end of the present year, the quality of the planes is something far superior to anything that has been in the air thus far.

Unfortunately the emphasis of the headlines in America has been on the quantity of planes, but abroad where the factors that count are speed, carrying power, and maneuverability the fact that the British have been able to down the Nazis on a ratio of at least one R. A. F. plane lost to two Nazi planes destroyed, the kind of aircraft is more important than numbers.

The American people do not know as yet the amazing contribution which has been made already to the battle for democracy by the American aircraft engineers, designers and builders. Nor is there any widespread appreciation of the fact that when the battle is over it is not the number of planes that Hitler had, but the kinds that will tell the story of his defeat.

From time to time criticisms of American aircraft have been leveled from the other side. The cry has been either for more armor plate or guns. But this is not a criticism of American planes at all; it is a manifestation of new needs uncovered by the exigencies of battle. Considering the long delays which have occurred in devising American manufacturers of changes found necessary as a consequence of battle experience, it is remarkable how many adjustments and changes in design already have been made.

The average American may wonder how all the aircraft is going to be shipped abroad. The truth is there isn't ocean tonnage enough to transport all the airplanes being manufactured for Britain and never could be for years to come even if submarine losses stopped tomorrow.

The space needed for the shipment of all the aircraft America plans to supply to Britain is beyond comprehension as a shipping problem. What will happen, of course, is that the bombers will fly across the Atlantic, as indeed many have already, and there will be in good weather, these flights of some pursuit planes over short hops from some Atlantic bases or the decks of aircraft carriers operating as a ferry boat service.

There seems to be no doubt that the shortage in freight space will not affect the steady stream of planes of all kinds destined for British areas. Incidentally, the aviation experts say something of the same problem of moving large quantities of planes at any one time faces the Nazi air command, too. Many people have wondered,

"AT CENTURY'S TURN"

By H. L. VAN DEUSEN

With Kingston's fire board planning to install siren horns to replace the present bell system alarms in the city I am wondering if the board plans to use the horns to sound the curfew as is done on the bell system each evening at 9 o'clock.

In looking through some old clippings I find that the present curfew ordinance was adopted by the common council on April 20, 1906. Its adoption followed several meetings held in various sections of the city advocating the adoption of such an ordinance.

In those early years the curfew was of some use, for while it did not keep the children off the streets, it did allow householder to set their clocks each evening.

Later with the invention and wide spread use of the radio even that purpose has lapsed as no one listens now as to when the curfew bell tolls.

The ordinance appears to be obsolete and no particular harm would result, as I see it, if it was repealed by the aldermen as it serves no particular purpose at this time.

The other day in a conversation with several men the talk veered to the subject of wages and the older men recalled the days when the average wage for a man in Kingston was about $10 a week.

On this sum the man of the house would raise a family and educate them, and there were but few families on relief in those days.

It is interesting to recall reading an old clipping of 1906 which recorded that the section hands on the old Ulster & Delaware railroad who were being paid $1.25 a day were to be given a raise to $1.40 a day.

Also that year in May, Governor Higgins signed Kingston's charter revision bill which, among other things, provided for 13 wards in the city with an alderman for each ward. That provision has never been changed since.

To jump ahead 10 years to 1916, one of the high lights of the annual minstrel show the Young Men's Brotherhood of the Lutheran Church, of the Redeemer given on May 12, in St. Peter's Hall was the singing of the famous quartet from Rigoletto. The quartet was composed of Herman

Balkan Upheaval Seen Near As British Outlook Gains

Effect of U. S. War Aid and Moving of Troops Into Greece May Bring Changes

By DEWITT MACKENZIE

Britain's initiative in rushing a well-equipped expeditionary force to Greece, coupled with the sharp lift given Anglo-Allied morale by America's aid program, has created a situation that may precipitate the Balkan upheaval which Hitler has been trying to avoid so as to concentrate on smashing England.

A general conflict in the Balkans isn't a certainty—for no man knows what that muddled mess will bring forth—but it definitely is a possibility. Should it develop, it would greatly change the trend of the war.

As a matter of fact even the possibility already has altered the course of events—for as Herr Hitler launches his win-or-lose drive against the British Isles, he finds himself compelled to maintain a great airforce in the eastern theatre.

The fuhrer failed last summer to gain control of the air from a comparatively small British aerial navy and thus permit of his planned invasion. Now, with the Royal Air Force strong and taking the initiative, he needs every plane he can muster for his offensive against England.

In other words the Nazis are spread out a bit too thin. If the Balkan show develops into something big, and Germany finds herself at war on two fronts, the tension will be greatly eased on England, thereby vastly increasing the Anglo-Allied chances of winning the war.

Much depends on whether Yugoslavia gives in to the German demand that she join the Axis. And Yugoslavia's decision will, in turn, influence Turkey's stand. It is said that efforts have been unavailingly made to strengthen the Balkan pact so as to bring Yugoslavia and Turkey into the conflict with Greece and Britain.

I suggested a week ago in this column that the fighting spirit of Yugoslavia was abroad, and that she was trying to stall the Nazis until she could get a line on what Britain's program of aid was. The landing of British troops in Greece answers one of Yugoslavia's biggest questions. Coincidentally America's decision for all-out aid to the Allies is said to have strengthened greatly the courage of Greece, Turkey and Yugoslavia to resist the Reich.

There still is one vital point that Yugoslavia certainly would want cleared up before deciding to defy Hitler. That is whether the Great Greek port and railroad of Salonika is to be defended. This historic city is on a hot spot because it is likely to be one of the first Nazi objectives if they attack Greece.

Should Salonika fall, Yugoslavia would be completely surrounded by the Axis and would therefore be cut off from outside supplies and aid. This would render her more or less helpless. The indications have been that the Greco-British forces do intend to defend this strategic port, and this would tend to strengthen the hands of those Yugoslavs who are insisting that their country present a firm front to Hitler, and fight if her independence is threatened.

At Testimonial Dinner

Employees of the New York Board of Water Supply, who planned the testimonial dinner for John H. McManus, Sr., and Frederick Koch, both retiring after 35 years of service, held Saturday night at the Hotel Stuyvesant, were (front left to right): Frank V. Bishop, John H. McManus, Jr., who attended instead of his father, who is ill; Frederick Koch and Harold Newman; (standing), J. E. Beswick, David P. Conway, Frank D. Vanderlyn, Edward P. Ward, chairman of committee, and G. D. St. Leger. At left in single picture is John H. McManus, Sr. At right is Don Henry, who was toastmaster for the dinner.

McManus and Koch Honored at Dinner By B.W.S. Workers

More than 50 employees from the various departments of the New York Board of Water Supply attended a testimonial dinner in the Hotel Stuyvesant Saturday night to honor John H. McManus and Frederick Koch of the bureau of claims retiring after 35 years of service.

Mr. McManus joined the board of water supply forces on June 13, 1906 and worked on the Ashokan reservoir department of construction until 1913. He transferred to the bureau of claims then and has been in that department ever since, retiring as chief of the bureau on February 28.

Because of illness, Mr. McManus was unable to attend the dinner arranged by a committee headed by Edward P. Ward as chairman. His son, J. H. McManus, Jr., was present to speak for his father and to receive a clock, presentation of which was made by Mr. Koch.

For more than a month, Mr. Koch helped prepare plans for the testimonial, without being aware that he was included as what might be called a co-star of the occasion. The date of his retirement is April 7. Mr. Koch, the father of Howard Koch, the Kingstonian who gained fame as a scenario writer in Hollywood, started in the real estate division of the board of water supply on March 25, 1906, transferred to the bureau of claims in 1915 and has been one of the most valuable men in this department ever since.

Harold Newman, co-worker of Mr. Koch, presented him with two traveling bags as gifts from reservoir employees, expressing their regret at seeing him pass into retirement, but wishing him many happy days for the future which he hopes to spend touring with his wife. They plan to visit their son in California.

Executives of the various departments of the board of water supply were high in their praises of both Mr. McManus and Mr. Koch and their work over the 35-year span.

Among the speakers introduced by Toastmaster Don Henry of the engineering division were Charles M. Clark, Attorney Henry Bright, John P. Newton, James E. Gutteridge, W. D. Hubbard, Sidney Clapp, John D. Groves, Jim Gordon, Hiram Hill, Frank Bishop, Edward P. Ward and Harold Newman.

Apron Club Chain Broken by Action Of P. O. Officials

A proposed Apron Club met a snag when local post office authorities removed from the mails and consigned to the dead letter limbo a number of postcards that were intended to be sent through the mails. The postcards were intended to build up an Apron Club chain, similar to the chain letter craze which has swept this vicinity periodically in the last half dozen years.

As fast as the postcards were discovered they were removed from the mails. The proposed Apron Club chain is extended with the use of postcards, of which each participant is requested to send five to as many friends.

To the person whose name is at the head of the list received by each housewife, an apron is to be sent. If the chain is unbroken each housewife is supposed to receive 25 aprons.

Some aprons may have been cleared through the mails, but the club seems to have been broken up by postal clerks here, who have removed the cards from the mails.

A similar attempt to start an Apron Club chain in Middletown has also been broken up in the same manner.

Slight Wreck Reported On Catskill Branch

A derailment of a locomotive and five cars on the Catskill Mountain Branch of the New York Central occurred Saturday, March 15, at 8 a. m. at Davenport Center. The freight train was proceeding from Oneonta to Kingston and had arrived at Davenport Center when the locomotive and five cars left the rails. No injuries were reported and slight damage consisted of some torn up track. The cause of the wreck has not been determined by railroad officials. The steam crane from Kingston was dispatched to the scene of the wreck, and by 10 p. m. Saturday all trace of the wreck had been removed. Service on the Catskill Mountain Branch was not disrupted to any extent.

Spring Meditation

Why does a spirit of restlessness seem to seize everyone, each Spring? Whenever there is a lull in business, many seem to bring all their causes for complaint forward. If we have a spell of rainy weather, it seems to dampen everyone's normally good will.

Isn't it odd how a little extra rain can rob us of our natural enthusiasm? Perhaps it is because we do not have enough interests to occupy us, in leisure hours. But the pity of it is that by the time we have heard just so many complaints, we begin to feel gloomy too. Can it be that our viewpoint is so easily changed by contact with discouraged folks?

To unburden your heart to a friend, when you are troubled, will bring you comfort, though it may depress him.

There is nothing like plenty of work to keep the mind happy and the heart young, provided it is the kind of work you are happy in doing. Many of us have to earn our living at some kind of work which is not to our choosing. That is why we need something to give us a constructive pleasure, during the period we are idle. Then we can choose a hobby that attracts us, for there is certain happiness in creative work, such as cultivating a garden, watching a rug grow beneath skillful fingers, or making clothes.

If we would just compare conditions here with those in Europe, we should find cause for rejoicing and it would be apt to make us feel more contented with our surroundings, and even willing to shoulder whatever responsibilities accompany them, for responsibility develops character.

Trying to be genial companions, let us carry our own sunshine by developing a cheerful mind. Then, when gloomy weather comes, it will not affect our viewpoint at all. Everyone likes to see a person smile. So let us put our shoulders to the wheels of progress. Keep Edgar A. Guest's suggestion in mind, when he says:

"Rise above your cares and sorrows!
Build on earth your glad tomorrow
Do not wait until life closes
Ere you stop to gather roses.
Here, amid life's round of duty,
Find its gladness and its beauty."

HEARTS HAVEN

Ruth Rosemary Corby

YESTERDAY, Eve Prentice and her friend Julie Emerson, whom she calls "aunt," have all in one day made friends with wealthy Mrs. Marbury and her equally wealthy niece Gina Goodell, and been invited to go on a trip with them to inspect an old and romantic house Mrs. Marbury is about to buy. The house is on an island off the North Carolina coast—Brett Rodman, expert in old houses, has gone ahead and is getting a cool reception from the caretaker.

Chapter Five
Dark Hints

BRETT had been glaring viciously at him, her broad, wrinkled face set in an almost snakelike expression. Yet now she stood quietly, her hands folded over a blue gingham work apron, her black dress and spotless collar and cuffs the perfect example of what a good housekeeper should wear.

Brett read her the short note and she listened without comment. He had an odd sense of embarrassment as he finished, as if he were ordering the woman out of her own house.

"Mrs. Marbury—the woman who may buy the house—thought

"has a letter from the estate; they're thinking to sell the house."

Mr. Jackson shook his head doubtfully. "Won't nobody buy this house."

"Why not?"

"Cause it's got a bad reputation, that's why," Jackson mouthed the words as though he enjoyed saying them. "Wouldn't nobody but us ever stay here. No, sircs—they won't buy this."

More Of Neil

DURING the days that followed Mrs. Marbury's tea, Eve quite forgot that she had ever been hesitant about meeting Gina Goodell. Gina's undisguised admiration had won her over completely.

Secretly, Eve admitted to herself that Neil Bowron, perhaps, had something to do with her change of heart. The morning after the tea, he had called and suggested a game of tennis. That afternoon he had insisted that she and Julie drive over to a neighboring town for the local auction. It had seemed natural enough to have dinner with him that night and go dancing. After that, Eve had tried to call a halt. But if she went riding, Neil was on the bridge path; when she slipped out for a swim, Neil waved to her from the boat.

"Are you dogging my footsteps?" she demanded, one time

Again it was a second before Mrs. Jackson moved.

she'd come down and see it." Brett went on talking, annoyed at his own diffidence. "She thought she might stay overnight, but I can see you're not prepared for that. Perhaps I could even ask her to postpone her coming for a few days, until—until you have a chance to clean up..."

The woman did not help him, but remained silent for a few seconds after he paused. Then she spoke. There was a harsh note in her voice that Brett had not heard before.

"She won't want to buy this house," Mrs. Jackson said with finality. "I know them society women—scared of a mouse, they are. They just come here and upset everybody. There ain't been no complaint about the way the house was kept, has there?" she demanded suddenly.

"Not that I know of," Brett irritated by her unforeseen opposition and at a loss to explain it, spoke shortly. "But now that I see it, there might be."

"No use keeping it spick and span for ghosts," Mrs. Jackson retorted. "We live in the back and that's enough work for a woman."

"You'd better show me through the house quickly," Brett said with some impatience. "I've got to get back to the mainland and try to head off the party."

Again it was a second before Mrs. Jackson moved. She seemed about to refuse, then thought better of it. Following her, Brett went back through the circular entrance hall and through a paneled door that led into another narrow hallway. This evidently set off the rooms "in back."

Four rooms led off the hall—one, formerly a laundry, had been converted into a bathroom. The shining enamel of the tub and washstand contrasted strangely with the little iron stove and enormous wooden wash tubs. Next to that was a storeroom. "We buy things by the barrel, mostly," Mrs. Jackson explained.

A short hall separated this room from the kitchen. As Brett passed it, he caught a glimpse of iron grillwork on the back porch, and longed to stop. But Mrs. Jackson was marking out, and she threw open the kitchen door with something of a flourish.

Ed Boyd was there, sullenly peeling potatoes. Nearby, apparently unoccupied, was a tall man so thin he was almost a skeleton. His prominent watery blue eyes seemed to bulge with astonishment as he turned them on his wife and Brett.

"My husband," Mrs. Jackson said shortly. "This man here"—she jerked her head toward Brett as she swam out and joined him. The sun was warm and friendly, and she hoisted herself upon the smooth boards and stretched out. There were few others in the water at this time of the afternoon—which was the reason Eve had chosen to swim at the moment.

"We haven't had our moonlight yet," Neil reminded her. "I'm only hanging around until I see how you look under a full moon."

"And then?"

"And then—Neil's voice was challenging—I shall propose, of course."

Eve turned to laugh at him, but what she saw in his eyes made her change her mind. She slipped hastily back into the water.

"Hey—you!" he called. "Gina's having a party tonight. I promised I'd bring you."

She waved one arm and continued her escape toward the shore. But that night, as usual, she was ready when Neil appeared.

Julie Has A Plan

THE party to visit the house which Mrs. Marbury intended to buy, did not languish with the passing days, but continued, instead, to grow. Julie was not too enthusiastic, since her plans were working out so well at the hotel. But Mrs. Marbury, pleased at Gina's continued interest, was almost as insistent as her niece on the affair.

"If Mrs. Marbury doesn't watch out, she'll have a problem on her hands," Julie predicted darkly. "Men like Brett Rodman often have a strange fascination for girls with Gina's money. She'd be much better off with Hamilton Millard. I tried to hint as much to Mrs. Marbury today, but I didn't get very far."

"He—Brett Rodman, I mean—is a strange person," Eve said dreamily. "He acted sort of well, sulky, at the party, and even at dinner afterward. But I imagine he could be nice if he tried."

Julie did not bother to disagree. Instead, she said:

"If we really do go tomorrow, I'm checking out. We can engage another when we come back, or if we can't, it's a nice out."

"But we'll be gone only overnight," Eve protested.

Julie shook her head. "Gina has a look in her eye that tells me overnight won't be enough. Anyway, it's my guess that even if we left the hotel, Neil Bowron would follow us to New York."

Eve thought he might, too—but she was afraid to give Julie too much hope.

the infant lives by the clock routines. Moving X-rays will be shown, the first movies ever shown of this work. Also a cartoon, "Sunshine Makers," in color will be featured. It is a humorous story of the value of milk in the human system. Santa Wants Pay Vincennes, Ind.—J. Andrew Williams wants its known that he's not Santa Claus, though he plays the part for hire at Christmas time.

He's suing Harold Kendall, night club keeper, for $30 he says is due him for serving as Saint Nick two nights last holiday season.

Williams has upped his price, he says, because the customers, in festive mood, tore his costume and spilled liquor on his whiskers.

Walking Menagerie
Los Angeles—Edwin Flanz, 59, dashed into police headquarters to report the robbery of . . .

Eighteen dollars, a parrot, two love birds and a pound of bologna. But Flanz still had plenty of pets: Another parrot on his shoulder, a tiny dog in one hand and a box of white rats in the other.

Backfire
Chicago—Just as Elmer Bull, 17, drew a bead on a target while practicing rifle shooting in his basement, a friend hurled an axe at the target. The bullet hit the axe, ricocheted and chipped off the tip of Bull's nose.

Ah, Love . . .
Los Angeles—Three University of Missouri romances raced their motor car 2,000 miles against a train to keep a date—they hope.

The train carried 700 Stephens College girls from Columbia, Mo., on a western tour. Among them were the Juliets of Tony Webster and William Hein of St. Louis and Merrill Gassett of New York.

Departures were on the same day. So were arrivals, the girls having made two stopovers en route.

The date depends upon chaperon approval. So far, the boys' only reward has been a half-hour's talk in—of all places—a crowded railroad station.

A yellow flag hanging from a ship's halyard indicates that there is pestilence aboard.

Faint Red Stars

Faded Suns, Perhaps 101 of Them, Seen in Eight Years' Search of Sky.

EVANSTON, ILL.—For eight years astronomers at Northwestern university have photographed and studied the sky in a quiet hunt for elusive celestial bodies known as faint red stars.

The other afternoon Dr. Oliver J. Lee, director of the university's Dearborn observatory, revealed a partial result of this search in announcing the discovery of 56 new faint red stars and the probable discovery of 45 others.

He reported this discovery before the annual meeting of the American Astronomical society in Philadelphia.

Red But Not Hot.
Only 55 such stars had previously been known in those zones of the sky, located in the Milky way, which were investigated by Dr. Lee and his associates, Ralph B. Baldwin, David W. Hamlin, and Richard F. Kinnaird.

The particular types of stars studied are known as classes R and N in the Draper classification. They are red in color, low in temperature, and have spectra characterized by bands of carbon and cyanogen.

Scientists are agreed that stars are constantly radiating away tremendous quantities of energy. Such a condition should result in their losing their luminosity, becoming in fact dead suns of the universe, small in size and relatively low in temperature. If such is the case, there should be great numbers of small stars of low temperature, like class R and N stars, even in our own region of the galactic system.

Reason to Expect More.
Heretofore astronomers have observed relatively few of such stars. The results of the present investigation therefore seem to prove that the number of such faint red stars in the universe is considerably greater than our present knowledge would indicate.

The region of the sky selected for the investigation—in scientific terminology—centered at 0 degrees, plus 9 degrees, and plus 18 degrees of declination to a magnitude of 11.5.

This represents an area about as large as one-third of the whole hemisphere of the sky visible at any one time. A star of magnitude 11.5 is only 1-200th as bright as the faintest star visible to the naked eye.

In the course of the study more than 100,000 stars were photographed and examined. Of these, 111 were positively identified as faint red stars of classes R or N. The Northwestern astronomers listed with a question mark 45 others which they believe will prove to be of types R and N when they are observed by more powerful instruments than those of Dearborn observatory.

The paper read at Philadelphia by Dr. Lee presented findings which are only a part of a much broader investigation on which he and his associates have been engaged since 1932. This is a spectrographic survey of the whole sky, designed to classify all faint red stars up to a magnitude of 11.5.

Father Saved a German
Once, So Poilu Is Freed
VICHY.—Forty years ago Roland Regnier's father saved the life of a German marshal at Peking during the Boxer rebellion.

Today authorities revealed that Regnier had been freed from a German prison camp with full military honors and had rejoined his family in the occupied zone.

While in the camp, Regnier lost another prisoner from his father, a French colonial infantryman, hauled Marshal Von Waldersee from a burning building just before it collapsed. The story worked its way up to officials, who checked and found it correct.

Telescopes Take Guesswork Out of Peak Spotting
LAKE PLACID, N. Y.—Guesswork in spotting the peaks of the northern Adirondack range has been largely eliminated for travelers up the Whiteface Mountain Memorial highway.

As each visitor passes the toll-house he is presented with a chart, which identifies the principal mountains, lakes, and rivers, and gives the elevations of the different peaks.

At strategic points along the highway powerful telescopes have been placed. Here the mountain "climber" can adjust the sights to suit his vision and the weather conditions, and gaze away at the almost limitless panoramas.

Owned 10,000 Horses, Dies Penniless at 83
SALEM, ORE.—W. W. ("Bill") Brown, 83 years old, who owned some 10,000 horses on central Oregon ranges during the World war, died penniless in the Methodist Old People's Home here.

At the height of his prosperity Brown owned 10,000 horses, 22,000 sheep and over 100,000 acres of land.

Hedgehog At War Front
A Mongolian hedgehog, once the pet of Prince Nagahisa Kitashirakawa at the battle front, has arrived in Tokyo, Japan, having been given by the Prince to the Tokyo Imperial University shortly before he was killed in action in Mongolia. The animal is only one foot long, is brown and pulls in all its legs on the approach of an enemy.

Seasonal Output
Called Important

Milk-Regulation Programs Consider Dairy Classes

Ithaca, N. Y., March 17—Any plan for regulating milk production in New York should take into account the wide differences in seasonal production of milk and the output of several groups of dairies to the total milk supply at different seasons of the year.

This is the statement of A. J. Pollard of the department of agricultural economics at Cornell University. A study of 3,000 farms, made by that department and the Farm Credit Administration, showed that dairies could be classified in five groups, based on the seasons when largest and smallest deliveries were made.

Some delivered about the same amount of milk at all seasons of the year. Some made their largest deliveries in summer and their smallest deliveries in winter, while others delivered most of their milk in winter and least in the summer. One group made its largest deliveries in the spring and the smallest in the summer.

Only a few producers did not fit into one of these groups. As to be expected, most dairies, about 60 per cent of those studied, had the highest production in the summer months and the lowest production in the winter months.

The summer dairies supplied about 55 per cent of the total milk delivered by the 3,000 dairies during the year. In June, these dairies supplied 63 per cent of the milk, but in November they accounted for only 46 per cent.

"It is significant, however, that in November the summer dairies supplied a greater proportion of the milk output than any other group," says Mr. Pollard.

Winter dairies were found to supply 17 per cent of the milk in November, but only nine per cent in June. Spring dairies were responsible for 10 per cent of the total both in June and November.

Dairies that had high production in late fall and during the winter tended to be near New York city, and the summer dairies in the more remote sections of the milk shed. Mr. Pollard points out. The spring dairies prevailed mostly in the central part of the milk shed.

GRANGE NEWS

Ulster Grange
The service and hospitality committee of Ulster Grange No. 969, of Ulster Park, under the chairmanship of Mrs. William Heister, is planning a "spring drive" to be held at the Ulster Park Community Hall Friday evening, March 21, at 8 o'clock.

There is a special program being planned for the occasion consisting of the dedication of a new American flag, which the service and hospitality committee is presenting to the Grange. There will be a pantomime show with music and songs. Another feature of the evening will be a parade of "fashions in hats" which will prove to be most entertaining.

A well noted pianist from Long Island will be present to accompany the program and to give a few piano solos. Dancing will follow the program for those who desire, after which refreshments will be served.

Tickets are now on sale and may be purchased from many members of the Grange. They will also be sold at the door the night of March 21.

Aged Man Found Dead Near Stove In His Residence

Michael Garofola, native of Italy and one of the first Italians to settle in East Kingston, was found dead in his home at that place about 5 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Coroner Henry A. Lamoureaux said that death might have been due to a heart attack brought on by exertion and excitement caused by attempts to control burning burners on an oil heater in the upstairs living room.

The coroner reserved his verdict, however, until results of an autopsy which he ordered could be secured. Mr. Garofola, who was about 70 years of age, had been living alone since the death of his wife in May, 1937.

The coroner said that apparently Garofola had been dead about 12 hours when his body was found Sunday afternoon by his son, John Garofola of 138 Clifton avenue, Kingston. The latter, with his wife, John had gone to East Kingston to pay the usual Sunday afternoon visit to the grandfather.

The oil heater had burned out when the son arrived. Nearby a radio still was turned on. Mr. Garofola's body, blackened with soot, was found on the floor near a wet coat and a pan of water.

Coroner Lamoureaux said that apparently Mr. Garofola had got up and dressed Sunday morning, lighted the oil burner and then turned on the radio. It is supposed that he noticed the flames on the heater dangerously high and got the water and attempted to turn them out. Either he was overcome by the fumes and smoke or he was stricken with a heart attack.

Deputy Sheriff Segelken and McCullough answered a call to the sheriff's office and found the house filled with soot when he arrived. The oil stove, however, had burned out and there was no sign of the fire had caused any damage to the room.

Mr. Garofola had been employed in the East Kingston brickyard for about 10 years ago. For the past three or four years he had been retired. He is survived by two sons, John of Kingston and Harry of Jersey City, N. J.; also one daughter, Mrs. Gene Tiano of Tacoma, Pa.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday morning from the Wolf funeral home at 9 o'clock and at St. Colman's Church, East Kingston, at 10 o'clock. A requiem Mass will be offered. Burial will be in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Hyman Golschinsky, a resident of this city for 18 years, died today. For a number of years he conducted a shoe repairing shop at 50 Broadway. He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, Rachel; two daughters, Mrs. Anna Saffels, Mrs. Alice Herzog, and one son, Morris, all of this city. The funeral will be held from the Wolf Funeral Home, 340 Broadway, this afternoon at 4 o'clock. Burial in Agudas Achim cemetery.

Howard J. Ostrander died at Kingston Hospital Sunday afternoon, after a long illness. Mr. Ostrander was a postman for the United States Post Office, and a member of Tide Water Boatmen, Local No. 933-1. Besides his wife, who was Bertha Williams he is survived by two daughters, Bertha, wife of George Dougherty, and Nathalie, wife of Raymond Dixon, a son, Frank, his mother, Mrs. Jane Dunn, a brother, Alex Ostrander, all of this city, also a sister, Mrs. Gertrude Clark of Newburgh and a granddaughter. He was a member of Trinity Methodist Church. Funeral services to which relatives and friends are invited will be held at his residence, 101 Bruyn avenue, Wednesday at 2 p. m. Burial will be in Montrose Cemetery.

WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, March 17—Charles Mora Siegel spent the week-end at his home here.

The Men's Club of the Methodist Church has received notice that the annual play-off of the season's games has been awarded to Port Ewen, and the game and customary dinner will be held on the evening of March 27 at that place. The season terminates the dart ball season.

A petition is being circulated throughout Woodstock, to bring about a change in the delivery of mail to this Post Office in the near future. According to the present plan, mail is compelled to remain for nearly two hours in Kingston, before leaving for Woodstock. If the present arrangement as outlined by the petition goes into effect, morning mail will be delivered here much earlier, and will be picked up at Kingston rather than coming to West Hurley. Most Woodstock people are enthusiastic about the plan.

Yasuo Kuniyoshi, is holding an exhibition at the Downtown galleries in New York.

Theresa Steiner, eminent child pianist, who for several years has spent summer vacations in Woodstock, was heard in a recital Sunday afternoon at 6 o'clock from station WNYC. She appeared with the N.Y.A. Symphony orchestra.

Clifford Wells is spending a few days at his home here, on leave of absence from the navy. It is Jones & Laughlin that he will remain until Saturday.

Betty Hyatt of Kingston spent the week-end visiting friends in Woodstock.

The Rev. A. Walter Baker spoke at the Lutheran Church Sunday evening. This was one of the regular Lenten meetings.

Mr. and Mrs. Al Smith of Poughkeepsie visited Mr. and Mrs. Nelson France Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Darling Are Hurt in Accident

John F. Darling of Olive Bridge sustained a cut and bruised hand and Mrs. Darling had cuts and bruises on the nose, knees and legs when the car in which they were riding was in collision with a car driven by Constantine DeMeo of Monticello about 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

The accident took place about three-quarters of a mile from Stone Ridge on Route 209. DeMeo told Deputy Sheriff Segelken and O'Brien that he was driving toward Ellenville, following another car and did not see a parked car until he was about to crash into it. He swerved sharply to the left just as the Darling car approached from the opposite direction. He pulled farther over and although a head-on collision was avoided the two cars side-swiped, both being damaged along their right sides.

Cheers for Prime Minister

Dublin, March 17 (AP)—Residents of this Irish capital, wearing the shamrock, cheered Prime Minister Eamon de Valera and his ministers on their way to St. Patrick's day Mass this morning and sports lovers later turned out for a football game between Ireland and Northern Ireland. The military parade which had been a feature of other St. Patrick's Days since Eire was established as an independent state was canceled because it might interrupt the training of the greatest army in her history.

SOUTH RONDOUT

South Rondout, March 17—A chowder sale will be held on Wednesday morning, March 19, in the Methodist Church basement. All are asked to bring containers before noon.

Circle No. 1 will meet in the church basement Tuesday. Mrs. Margaret Hyatt celebrated her 81st birthday Friday, March 14. She was the recipient of many cards, gifts and calls from her friends.

Financial and Commercial

All Averages Had Gains Last Week

Rise in the Commodities Continued for Period

Stocks were stronger Saturday, led by shipbuilding issues and with the gains made at the beginning of the week all Dow-Jones averages showed net gains for the week as a whole. The industrial average was ahead 1.93 points for the week, to close at 123.40; rails had a net gain of .26, to 28.09 and utilities bettered their position by .31, to close at 19.74.

The rise in commodities continued through the week. Brokers with commodity departments have been getting considerable business as volume of commodity trading increased with the advance in prices. On Saturday many staples advanced to new highs for the season, new tops being established in at least some months in wheat, cotton, cottonseed oil, lard, coffee, sugar and cocoa. The Dow-Jones futures index was up .37 point for the day and closed the week at 61.50 per cent of the 1924-26 average, which is taken as 100 per cent. So far in March the index has shown a gain daily with the exception of three days. Sugar has been one of the features in the rise and new highs for the past year and a half were established in domestic futures market Saturday before profit-taking reduced some of the gains. Raw sugar held firmly at the 3.35 basis. Cocoa futures advanced more than 1/4 cent a pound Saturday although the largest cocoa cargo ever to enter this country, 150,000 tons, arrived on a Norwegian steamer, Union Carbide & Carbon, had gross income of $83,071.01 in 1940, a gain of 50 per cent over 1939. Higher taxes and charges cut gross nearly in half, but net still was able to $4.55 a share as against $3.86 in 1939, although not up to the company's peak year, 1937.

American interests have bought Britain's most important direct investment in this country, the American Viscose Corp., largest rayon producers in the world. Bought by an investment banking group headed by Morgan, Stanley & Co., Inc., and Dillon, Read & Co. Eventually the securities will be offered to the American public.

Whitbeck Is Arrested

Russell Whitbeck, 20, of Monticello, a farm hand, was arrested Saturday by Corporal Baker and Trooper Metzger of the B.C.I., and after arraignment before Justice Seth C. Lippincott was committed to the Ulster county jail to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of burglary in the third degree. Whitbeck is charged with having taken a cash register containing $12 from a tavern at Walkkill, conducted by Mrs. Mary Wells, Thursday night last. The cash register after being smashed and the money removed was thrown into the Walkkill river.

Soot Causes Fire

Fire, which broke out behind a chimney place that had been closed up, in a third floor apartment of the six-family house at 151 Abeel street, Sunday afternoon was extinguished by the fire department before any damage was caused to the building. The house was occupied by six negro families. The building is owned by Mrs. Pearl Cohen. According to Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy, soot, which had collected behind a piece of fibre board used to close up the chimney opening in the rooms of John Watterson, ignited.

Cruisers Arrive

Auckland, New Zealand, March 17 (AP)—The United States cruisers Brooklyn and Savannah and the destroyers Cassin, Cummings, Shaw and Tucker, arriving today for a three-day visit, were greeted by thousands of New Zealanders who lined the waterfront. The ships were on a training cruise.

New York, March 17 (AP)—The stock market extended its week-end rally in spots today but many leaders were unable to do much on the upside.

Senior issues of utility companies maintained their popularity while an early advance of steels and shipbuilders flattened out perceptibly after mid-day. Gains of fractions to a point or so, however, were plentiful near the final hour. There were a few fast intervals and transfers for the full proceedings were at the rate of approximately 400,000 shares. The relatively bright corporation earnings picture, in the face of climbing taxes, was viewed by brokers as the main buying prop. Bonds were mixed, with rails in demand. Commodities were uneven.

Standard Gas & Electric and Electric Power & Light preferreds were given a push among stocks. Resistant elsewhere were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Pennsylvania, Douglas Aircraft, Dow Chemical, Kennecott, Westinghouse and J. C. Penney. Inclined to falter were U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Western Union, Montgomery Ward and Anaconda. Up occasionally in the curb were Todd Shipyards, Aluminum of America, Creole Petroleum and International Petroleum.

SMOKELESS POWDER PLANT READY AHEAD OF TIME

Here is a general view of the new $44,000,000 smokeless powder plant in Radford, Va., which was dedicated by Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson three months ahead of schedule. It is expected to turn out 300,000 pounds of powder a day and is the first new munitions plant to go into operation. Construction was done in only seven months. It.

SHOKAN

Shokan, March 17—Ed P. Steinert was numbered among the Kingston business men calling in the hub of the reservoir country Friday.

Miss Anita Wallerstein, teacher of the Ashokan school, spent the week-end with relatives in New York.

Due to unfavorable weather conditions, the early run of maple sap has been disappointing to local operators. Early last week the cold snap slowed down the flow, while more recently the nights were not cold enough in proportion to the mild daytime weather. Members of the Charles Rodriguez family came up from Brooklyn Friday night for a brief sojourn at their mountain place, the former Daniel Sampson farm. Mr. and Mrs. Orville Winchell of Kingston attended O. S. Baptist Church services here Sunday morning and afternoon. Elder A. H. Bellows conducted the services. Gradual melting of the great snow field in the Ashokan lower watershed has resulted in but little run-off up to this writing. The ground, as frequently has happened in the past few years, appears to soak up the precipitation without emptying much water in to the brooks.

Mr. and Mrs. Jules Engleberg of the state road spent the week-end in New York city, their former home.

George Rose, formerly of Shandaken, is keeping bachelor's hall at the Harrison Freese place on the mountain road this winter. Friday, March 18, 1887, funeral services were held in the Shokan Dutch Church for Miss Lizzie Wolven, aged 16 years. The Rev. J. T. Bergen preached the funeral sermon.

Miss Niement Hewitt of Kingston spent Sunday with friends in Shokan.

Mr. and Mrs. Elwyn Winchell last Friday observed their 28th wedding anniversary. The couple have resided here since their marriage at Brodhead.

Several local women attended the combined bridge and Home Bureau meeting, Mrs. C. H. Weidner's last Thursday afternoon.

He Named Races
Miami, Fla., March 17 (AP)—This being St. Patrick's Day, there's evidence that stewards at Tropical Park let Irish Dinty Dennis, the publicity director, name the races. On the program are the Tipperary, Mayo, Killarney, Limerick, St. Patrick's Day, Kilkenny, River Shannon and Cork.

Hank Greenberg Classified
Detroit, March 17 (AP)—Hank Greenberg, who was reported to have been recommended for a deferred status under the selective service act, has been placed in Class 1A and is subject to immediate call for army duty when his number comes up. Greenberg's draft board announced today.

Rhodes Is Arrested
Archie Rhodes, 41, of RD 2, Highland, was arrested at Clintondale today by Deputy Sheriff Wager on a disorderly conduct charge. He was committed to the county jail pending a hearing before Justice William B. Carr.

Portrait of Agony
Framed in a shattered automobile window, an unidentified friend consoles Ed Krunt (right), 19, who writhes in pain from a broken leg suffered in an auto crash near Elmont, N. Y. Two 19-year-old boys also were injured in the crash.

Home Bureau
Meeting Stated
At 1:30 p. m. on Thursday, March 20, the Lake Katrine Home Bureau will meet at the home of Miss Bertha Snyder in Mt. Marion. The day's program will be full, for besides the second food lesson, to be given by Miss Snyder, the leader, there will also be a business meeting and election of officers.

Mrs. Roach Dies
Hollywood, March 17 (AP)—Mrs. Marguerite O. Roach, wife of Hal Roach, veteran movie producer, died of pneumonia today. She was stricken last Tuesday, shortly after returning from a Honolulu vacation.

From a five-cent package of seed, C. Thetford of Norwich, England, grew 178 pounds of high quality tomatoes in his back garden last summer.

Nineteen Leave City for Albany

Next Quota of 16 Slated to Leave March 31

Nineteen men from Kingston left this morning on the 10:20 o'clock bus for the army induction station in Albany. Of the quota 15 were white and four were negroes.

The next quota of 16 men, all white, will leave Kingston on Monday, March 31.

Those who left this morning were:

Franklyn Charles Seaman, 60 West Chestnut street, volunteer. Robert Edwin Davis, 260 Albany avenue, volunteer.

Michael Alexander Debrosky, 33 Emerick street.

Norman Albert Shapiro, 19 Jays Lane.

Walter Lewis Thiel, 24 New street, colored.

Harold Emil Greenburg, 114 Second avenue.

Derringer-Walters Combo Set to Ring Up 40 Again

By DILLON GRAHAM
Sports Editor, AP Feature Service
Tampa, Fla. — There's been a lot of strengthening around the National league, particularly at the Brooklyn and St. Louis camps, but when you start thinking about pennant chances it's pretty hard to shy away from Cincinnati's Derringer-Walters pair.

They've guaranteed Skipper Bill McKechnie at least 40 victories the past two seasons and the cautious Deacon figures he can count on them for that many again.

with 18, Al Smith with 15 and Mel Harder with 12.

But it's hard to find any two pitchers who will win at least 20 games each. Rowe won 24 and Bridges 22 for the Tigers in 1934 and Carl Hubbell took 21 and Hal Schumacher 23 the same year for the Giants. Lefty Gomez accounted for 21 and Red Ruffing 20 for the Yanks in 1937.

You'll have to check far back in the record books, however, to find any other team that could boast a pair of 20-game winners for two straight years.

The Reds' No. 3 man isn't far behind Paul and Bucky. Young Gene Thompson grabbed 16 last year and should be good for more.

Whitey Moore has always been a good pitcher just a step from a big-league star. He's due to hit the jackpot anytime now.

Then there are Joe Beggs, who won a dozen chiefly in relief roles; the veteran Jim Turner and Johnny Vander Meer, who may have another good year. Elmer Riddle, John Hutchings, Witt Guise and Bob Logan may add 8 or 10 wins each. Logan was the top southpaw in the American association with 18 wins for Indianapolis. Monte Pearson, who was an in-and-out with the Yanks, is another McKechnie is counting on. Monte can't think of any ailments to mention.

"I'm in top shape and I believe in the Reds," he says.

That pitching corps is what the other clubs are going to find hard to beat. Other clubs can boast better outfields and infields and more punch but, on paper, they can't match the Reds' hurling.

Deadline Tonight For Bowling Teams

100 Teams Expected to Compete in Tourney

All entries for the 1941 city bowling championships will close tonight at 12 midnight. Advance registrations indicate that at least 100 teams will be in line for the annual bowling meet. The championships will start March 29 at the Central Recreation alleys.

A special meeting Friday evening at the Kingston Bowling Association the secretary was empowered to reject all entries received after tonight.

Officials declared at the meeting that about 68 teams had already applied for registrations, teams from Ellenville and Saugerties included in the early list. Bowlers appearing late for any event will start in the frame in which their team is then competing, according to A.B.C. tournament regulations.

Stops Indians
The next day he was called out of the bull pen in the ninth inning when Cleveland had loaded the bases with nobody out — and stopped the Indians dead. Yesterday, after two days rest, he hurled the full nine innings against the Yankees and beat them 6-5 on six hits.

While St. Louis has been starring one individual, other clubs have compiled brighter records by splitting up the work.

The Chicago White Sox have gone undefeated in three games and the Philadelphia Athletics have won eight out of nine to give the Grapefruit League to the western, or Pacific Coast, division.

The Brooklyn Dodgers lost their share of the lead last week by splitting their squad, sending one unit to Miami to battle the New York Giants and keeping a gang in Havana to play the Cuban All-Stars. Neither division was successful. The Giants were hot and won five straight games from assorted opposition during the week as did Connie Mack's Athletics.

Orlando, Fla.—The Washington Senators are touting Pitcher Sid Hudson to beat the second-year jinx this season. He has pitched six innings and allowed only one run in exhibition games. Jimmy Bloodworth's long drive with the bases loaded in the ninth helped beat the Tigers yesterday.

Tampa, Fla.—The Cincinnati Reds' camp still is talking about Bill Werber and Don DiMaggio of the Boston Red Sox squaring off behind third base in yesterday's exhibition game. Manager Bill McKechnie grabbed Werber and other players elbowed DiMaggio out of range so no harm was done.

Lakeland, Fla.—Manager Del Baker of the Detroit Tigers still says he is going to give rookies every chance, but he's already depending on Hank Greenberg's big bat to make runs. Greenberg collected three hits against Washington yesterday.

Nothing on Juries
Fort Myers, Fla.—Manager Bill Toffel of the New York Giants finally has heard from Bill Juries, the veteran shortstop who was sent to Mayo Clinic for treatment of dizziness. The wire read: "Still nothing definite to report, but an glad team is going so well."

Lakeland, Fla.—John Grodzicki, who went nine innings in beating the Yankees yesterday, gave eight walks, but only six hits and struck out seven. In great shape after wintering in the Canal Zone, the rookie had gone six innings without giving a hit prior to yesterday.

Test Tubes Win
At the municipal auditorium Saturday afternoon Mauterstock's Test Tubes defeated St. Joseph's Juniors in a close game by 26-25. Ken Heppner was high scorer with 11 markers. The scores: Test Tubes (26)—Smith 5, Heppner 11, Sickler 2, Snyder 6, Enrick 2, St. Joseph's (25)—Amato 2, Howard 10, J. Amato 1, Stanton 4, Rafferty 0, Crosby 8.

Both Giants and Mackmen Have Winning Streaks of Five; Grodzicki of Cards Shines

(By The Associated Press)

The brightest jewel uncovered in baseball's spring training so far is John Grodzicki, a powerful, 24-year-old right-hander who will make everybody in the National League remember his name if the St. Louis Cardinals don't work him to death before the season opens.

Although the Cardinals started 20 pitchers to camp, this unheralded rookie from Natick, Mass., has appeared in four games in ten days — and these have been the only games the Redbirds won.

Grodzicki was named by Manager Billy Southworth as the starting pitcher in the first game the club played in the Grapefruit League and held the New York Yankees hitless for three innings. That was March 7. On March 12 he worked another hitless three-inning span against the World Champion Cincinnati Reds.

U. S. Army Bombers Make 'Emergency' Landing

Hundreds of Kingstonians jammed the airport Saturday afternoon when two United States Army dive bombers of the 15th Bomb Squadron of Lawson Field, Fort Benning, Ga., made an unannounced visit. The planes were enroute from Dayton, O., to Mitchell Field, and were inspecting landing conditions at small fields. These two planes were the largest and fastest ever to attempt a landing at the Kingston Airport. In the top photo the two "cub" planes, which regularly use the port are dwarfed between the large bombers. The lower left shows one of the large planes clearing the trees and buildings at the end of the field by a large margin. Before the army fighters could attempt to take off it was necessary to plow a wide swath of snow from the middle of the field. The lower right shows a close view of the first plane to land. Note size of pilot as he emerges from the top of the plane.

Affirmative Wins In Debate on U.S. Foreign Relations

A debate touching upon the nation's foreign policy held last night at St. Joseph's school hall, was praised by the Rev. John P. McCaffrey, pastor of St. Joseph's Church as an excellent start on a practice "which should be taken up and encouraged throughout the land."

The debate on the question "Resolved That the Policy of the United States Government in Avoiding Foreign Alliances Should be Abolished," was won by the affirmative upheld by Edward Fenton and Vincent Connelly. Their views were ably opposed by two other local attorneys, John R. McManus and Guido Napoletano. County Judge J. Edward Conway, Eugene B. Carey and Dr. Robert B. Whalen found both sides so effective that their decision was difficult to make and Judge Conway praised the high standard set by all members of the debating team.

The Rev. Father Simmons, spiritual director of the society opened the meeting with a welcome to the 225 men and women who attended and he urged the audience to make use of the American right to freedom of speech and assembly.

A democracy like that of the United States, said Father Simmons, flourishes when the great mass of the nation's people try to understand and solve their own problems and make known their viewpoints to duly elected representatives in the government.

Grave danger of a change in government to a less worthy system might well follow public indifference to national problems and issues, Father Simmons indicated, and he added that "in falling we should be very much like Esau selling his substance for a mess of pottage."

Before the meeting of the Holy Name group closed, he called upon Father McCaffrey.

known. Under the city charter no provision is made for extending the water service of the city outside the city limits.

It will be recalled that some years ago the village of Port Ewen made application to the city to extend the water service to that village, but the application was denied and the village later constructed its own water system.

Urges Support for Drive Of Catholic Charities

Declaring that "Our liberties and our free institutions are to us God-given treasures for whose protection we stand as one," Most Rev. Francis J. Spellman, D.D., Archbishop of New York, urged wholehearted response to the 1941 Appeal of New York Catholic Charities, in a pastoral letter read at all Masses in the 374 parishes of the archdiocese Sunday.

"The times have thrown us closer together, have forced us to realize how truly we are neighbors with so many common interests to be safeguarded, so many common hopes to be achieved. Our liberties and our free institutions are to us God-given treasures for whose protection we stand as one—strong, alert, resourceful and determined. God grant that an united America may hold aloft the torch of Christian ideals to light the way for the rebuilding of Christian civilization."

"Charity binding men to God must at the same time bind America together in national unity. Through the years, the Church in New York has followed the footsteps of her divine Founder, in His compassion for the poor and the afflicted. Her agencies of mercy by the score today reach out consecrated hands to those who are in need. He devoted laity is noted throughout the land for charity, which in the words of St. Paul: "never faileth away."

Touching on world conditions, Archbishop Spellman writes, "In this shattered world of ours, many are today turning anew to religion for strength and consolation. In the Church they find a secure guide to peace and justice."

"Mindful of your enduring spirit of kindness, I am confident that you will respond wholeheartedly to the Appeal of Catholic Charities for the year 1941. Your support of this sacred cause will be in truth be an act of love for God, for neighbor and for country."

victims of securities swindlers and $350,000 to those losing to loan sharks.

State Insurance Superintendent Louis H. Park asked a law for compulsory automobile insurance or, at least, increased proof of a motorist's financial responsibility.

Legislative leaders reported increasing support of measures "tapering off" the eight-year-old mortgage moratorium.

The State Unemployment Insurance Advisory Council urged immediate creation of a state re-employment planning commission to prepare for any mass unemployment that might follow cessation of defense production.

Meantime, Governor Lehman refused to approve a bill which would have revised present law to allow unsalaried public or school officers to have a personal interest in a sale, lease or contract with the board or commission on which they are members.

The measure would have required the officers to disclose their interests in such matters and refrain from voting but the governor asserted it would "open the door to possible breaches of trust."

Earlier, he vetoed a bill to postpone the motor vehicle registration date from February 1 to April 1. He explained the measure would have deferred state receipt of more than $30,000,000 and forced the borrowing of that amount for two months, adding substantially to "our already very heavy short-term borrowing."

Two Army Planes Attract Crowd at Kingston Airport

telephone lines which run adjacent to the field. Both ships made a neat landing in the nine inches of snow which covered the flying field. Because of the weight the planes cut through the snow and encountered no difficulties in landing. However it was impossible for them to take off until the runway had been plowed.

In a conversation with the officers, Mr. Garraghan said they told him that one of the purposes of the flight had been to drop in at small fields to ascertain whether they were large enough to be used as emergency landing fields in case of war.

The local field was pronounced of sufficient size to be used for light bombers for emergency landings but the army men said the wires running along the field on two sides were a serious handicap and should be removed if the field is to be considered suitable for larger planes.

Mr. Garraghan said that Lieut. Schuster told him that while the landing was without incident on Saturday he would not use the field again until the wires had been removed. Mr. Garraghan suggested that the local people petition for removal of the wires in order to make the local field safe and available for emergency use.

Six Are Arrested

Six autoists were arrested over the week-end in Kingston by the police on charges of traffic violations. All furnished bail for their appearance later in police court. Frank J. Nau of Lake Katrine and Joseph Sam of New Hartford, were charged with passing red traffic lights, while Blennie Anderson of Catskill, Maria Deyo of Lafayette avenue, Arthur Cohen of Greenfield and George A. Spear of Ellenville, were charged with overtime parking.
